How it's actually protected

Data cipher

XChaCha20-Poly1305 (AEAD) via libsodium — detects tampering, not just scrambles data.

Password → key

Argon2id, 128 MiB memory, 3 passes — deliberately slow, brute-forcing is impractical.

Key combination

BLAKE2b generic hash merges independent secrets into one wrapping key.

Architecture

One random 256-bit vault key is generated once; every unlock method independently wraps its own copy — none is a weaker copy of your data.

Zero-knowledge by design: your vault file and its encryption keys never leave your own device on any tier, Free included — there is no vault content for us to see, analyze, or sell.
